WE have received a small pamphlet entitled Meteorological Observations made at Ichang and at South Cape, Forman, in 1838, compiled by Dr. Doberck, Director of the Observatory, Hongkong. The pamphlet contains tables showing the air tems perature and the rainfall at these two stations during each month of the year 1883, with some explanatory notes by Dr Doberck. Appended are tables giving the sunshine at South Cape and Hongkong for the twelve months April 1st, 1888, to March 31st, 1889,—also the rainfall at some thirty stations in China during each month of 18 8. The pamphlet is reprinted from rological Society.

THE Governor, in the report on the condition and prospects of the Colony, which he forwarded to the Secretary of State for the Colonies some months ago, referred to the completion of several public works, among them being Victoria College, to which he alluded in the following terms :- Victoria College, which has been several years in construction, was also completed in July last. It is unquestionably a very handsome building of which the Colony may be proud, but it has cost a large sum ($251,587) and promises also to be extremely costly in maintenance. Seeing how grievous is and must have been the need of other public works, and noting that provision might have been made for the same number of pupils in a more modest building; I cannot but feel that it would have been better if much of the expense incurred, and time devoted to this edifice, had been diverted in other directions." works was laid on the table of the Legis-Brown says :- 'The new buildings for the Contral School (Victoria College) water regret to state that the roof leaks in several places. SUPREME COURT. AN ORIGINAL JURISDICTION. (Before Han. Mr Justice Field ng - Clarke, Acting Chief Instice). Tuesday, 10th February.

QUEER CASE ARISING FROM A SHARE

An issue was submitted to his Lordship for decision in connection with a suit at the instance of J. F. C. da Rozi v. H. A. Shirazee, the question being-Was a binding agreement for settlement of the matters in question in this action entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant? It was aubmitted for the defendant that such an agreement was made, which the plaintill denied. Mr. Phillippo, instructed by Mr J. F Webber, appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr J. J. JUDGMENT-SOME SCATHING COMMENTS. His Lordship, in giving judgment, after stating the issue, said—I have first of all to decide whether a binding agreement in settlement of the matters in question was come to, and then deal with the summons and say what effect my finding shall have apon it. This was an action against a broker who made a contract for the purchase of shares on behalf of a client who failed It has been assumed for the purposes of this case that he was therefore placed in position of liability to the plaintiffs The action is brought against him on that assumption, and evidently, very shortly afterwards suggestions and negotiations were made with a view to settle the action or to settle the question of his linbility instead of fighting it out, and there is a sum of $100 and 31 sovereigns which is paid by the defendant, and it is evident to me that that sum had reference to the negotiations for a settlement, the terms of which were substantially fixed at that time, because, it being found that this as marking a new era in the commercial terwards I got a bill of costs from Mr sum did not, according to the market rate, quite make up $300, a further sum able this senson, that the pioneer shipment pay the promissory note. I told him it was think, have been for no other purpose than which the parties had come to. There is no reason why a payment on account should reach a certain exact r and figure unless there was an agreement. It would be ridiculous to suppose that this small sum of $4.70 should be paid for any other purpose. Now the defendant's account of this is that shipm nts of the plant from almost all the that Mr Webber would approve. Mr Van the first suggestion as to settlement was tea districts of China. SHANGHAI. 'A Stranger,' writing of Shanghai und the name of ' H ingle on the mud,' says ; Among the peculiarities of Hangle may be mentioned the Postal arrangements. I am not quite sure how many different post offices the city can beast of, but there are at least the following, English, French German, American, Japanese, and Local Some of these, too, charge different rates, For instance, you can send a letter to England through the French post office for seven cents, whereas it would cost you ten couts if posted in the British post office. The funny part is that it would go by the same steamer, and arrive at the sume time either way. On the other hand a letter to Hongkong would cost seven cents through the French but only five by the Britisl post office. Moreover it is not permitted to use those post offices indiscriminately. If, f r instance, you wish to send a letter to Jaran you must to to the Japanese post office. Another little poculiarity is that social life in Hangle is made as pleasant as possible, so that existence in the Far East, instead of a dreary exile, becomes a bed of roses, with just enough work to give a zest to the pleasures that follow. Perhaps in no other place can you make so many acquaintances in so short a time.
